

Through small day-to-day events, Stajano describes with simplicity the approach of death. The book photographs a part of life often hidden or ignored: quiet suffering, love and respect expressed through the care of suffering bodies. Certain pages should be read in schools among teenagers who often do not realise how precious their lives are.

Antonella Mariotti

La Stampa

Translated by Patricia Brigid Garvin